

SQE Update - August 2025

In this bulletin, find out about our aspiring and newly qualified solicitors' case studies, the fund to support people from disadvantaged backgrounds and our qualifying work experience resources. You can also watch our latest webinar looking at the options available for studying for the SQE.

Introducing our new case study series

Over the coming months, join us as we dive into the real-life experiences of aspiring and newly qualified solicitors. Discover their study methods, support strategies and access top tips. Also learn how they did their qualifying work experience and how aspiring solicitors balanced work commitments with exam preparation.

£360,000 for disadvantaged candidates taking the SQE

We have distributed £360,000 to 11 organisations to support people from disadvantaged backgrounds with the cost of sitting the SQE. These organisations provide a range of legal, educational and social mobility services and aim to make the legal industry more accessible to people from underrepresented groups.

Qualifying work experience - what it means for solicitors and law firms

Under the SQE route, aspiring solicitors must complete two years of full-time (or equivalent) qualifying work experience (QWE). This must involve providing real legal services and give candidates the opportunity to develop competences from the Statement of Solicitor Competence.

To support employers, we have a range of resources offering information and guidance on QWE.

Validating a degree

Aspiring solicitors must have their degree or equivalent qualification checked before they apply for admission as a solicitor. We have updated key information about this, including what we will need from candidates, international degree check costs and how long it will take for an outcome.
