

A decision to close a practice

We can, in effect, close a practice. We call this an "intervention". An intervention is a step taken to protect clients' interests and money, in the public interest . It is often an urgent protective measure, and does not necessarily mean we have made any findings against the regulated firm individual, such as a solicitor or a registered European lawyer.

The main things that we do during an intervention:

- Stop the firm from operating; take possession of all documents and papers held by the firm (including clients' papers), and
- Take possession of all money held by the firm (including clients' money).

Legislation [\[#legislation\]](#) gives us a range of reasons for intervention. These are known as "grounds".

We can intervene if, for example:

- there are grounds to intervene, such as abandonment or suspected dishonesty, and
- an intervention is needed to protect the public.

We will generally immediately publish a decision to intervene. This to let members of the public know that the firm has closed. The detail we publish will usually include the details of the agents, normally a law firm, that we have asked to help us manage the intervention.
