Issue 127 - May 2024

- General updates [#tab_f9ef1]
- Compliance updates [#tab_f9ef2]

Welcome to the latest issue of SRA Update. This month we highlight a range of resources and reports, which hopefully will provide you with important guidance and best practice in your day-to-day work. This includes a review into the use of strategic litigation against public participation (SLAPPs) and how firms can steer clear of these, guidance for in-house solicitors and information on offering qualifying work experience.

If you are in the Leicester or Manchester areas, you also still have the opportunity to sign-up to our free Innovate roadshows, or to join roundtables where you can meet members of our senior team to discuss the key issues for you and your firm. And it is not just if you live in those areas that you have the chance to get involved with our work. We are still keen to hear from anyone who has a view on what the future of consumer protection should look like in our sector, your views really matter on this as we build toward developing firm proposals later in the year.

Due to ongoing concerns, including from the Financial Conduct Authority, over how compensation claims relating to financial product mis-selling are being handled by some firms, we have issued new guidance and a related warning notice. The materials cover a range of issues, including many related specifically to the handling of bulk/mass volume claims.

Review reveals firms have good awareness about SLAPPs

We have recently published a new review looking at law firm understanding of avoiding getting involved in strategic lawsuits against public participation (SLAPPs). The review involved visits and file inspections across a range of regulated firms and found good overall awareness and lots of best practice examples.

Our review of consumer protection arrangements, in response to shifting risks in the sector continues, and we are keen to hear your thoughts. The review focuses on how to reduce the risk that something goes wrong at a regulated law firm, while finding the right balance between protections and potential impact on the cost of legal services. Included in this review is consideration of compensation fund arrangements.

Webinar - QWE back to basics

[\[https://events.sra.org.uk/sra/672/home\]](https://events.sra.org.uk/sra/672/home)

Qualifying work experience (QWE) is the on-the-job training needed to qualify as a solicitor through the SQE route. But what is it? If you are a law firm or organisation providing QWE and want to know more, sign up for our free webinar on Wednesday 22 May. Find out about recording candidates' experience, what counts and what doesn't, and how you as the supervising solicitor can sign it off.

Welcome to the latest issue of Compliance News. In this month's edition you can read about our newly published guidance and warning notice dealing with issues linked to solicitors handling compensation claims for mis-sold financial products, especially those pursued on a bulk action basis. This is an area over which the Financial Conduct Authority and others have expressed concern, especially around practices currently being seen in relation to car finance claims. Looking toward later in the year, if you haven't already done so, please save the date for this year's conference. We are working hard to pull together another event packed with dozens of expert speakers, sessions and more, and we know from feedback received each year how much you value the day. Also, a reminder about making sure you uphold your obligations to account to clients for a 'fair sum' for any interest earned are discussed as rates remain higher than they have been. And see below for details of our next anti-money laundering webinar, which will tackle many of the most common questions you ask us on a day-to-day basis.

New legal services general licence [<https://contact.sra.org.uk/sra/news/sra-update-127-new-ofsi-licence/>]

The Office of Financial Sanctions Implementation has issued a new legal services general licence. This allows those working for those designated under the sanctions regime to receive payment, as long as they adhere to certain terms. The new licence was issued at the end of last month.

Scam alerts – police your identity

[<https://contact.sra.org.uk/sra/news/sra-update-127-scam-alerts/>]

We have been warning for many years about identity theft affecting law firms. Criminals routinely take your good name and reputation in a bid to trick the public into sharing confidential information or transferring money. This could happen to any of you.

Interest rates and the client account

[<https://contact.sra.org.uk/sra/news/sra-update-126-interest-rates/>]

A recent survey by the Law Society found that some firms have been financially ‘propped up’ by interest earned on money held in the client account. Firms have a duty to account to clients for a ‘fair sum’ for any interest earned by their money.

Sanctions guidance – all firms must comply

[<https://contact.sra.org.uk/solicitors/guidance/sanctions-regime-firm-wide-risk-assessments/>]

The sanctions regime is run by the Government and supports measures to protect the UK’s interests. All firms are captured by the regime, it is not just for those firms that are in scope of the money-laundering regulations. We have produced guidance on complying with sanctions as a large number of you will not be familiar with some of the requirements.
